Dear Professor Marks:

In my letter to you, I forgot to mention that I have, waiting to be forwarded to you, a typewritten copy of the autobiography of Mrs. Isabel C. Barrows, as far as she wrote it. She never completed it.

Prof. Henry Raymond Mussey asked that I should send this copy to you when I had read it. I have detained it because her ~~son~~ daughter

Mabel prefixed to it a few pages, giving a summary of her mother's remarkable life, of which ^{summary} I wish to take a copy ~~at~~ before sending it on; & I have not yet found time to finish making the copy. I thought you would probably not have time to read the MS (which is quite bulky) until vacation.

Pray do not bother to answer this.

Yours always affectionately Alice Stone Blackwell.
